ast night when Charles B. Dillingham presented him at the Globe Theatre after the usual absence in "Tip Top." The comedian back on the familiar stage.

Mr. Stone then appeared in an Indian disguise, which gave him the opportunity to do some sharp shooting. He knocked to pieces balls of glass thrown into the air, and then, with the aid of no other mirror than the blade of his shining bowie knife, hit the small buil's shining bowie knife, hit the small buil's specific this were not enough for one scene, he gave an exhibition of trick riding or the horse which carried him across the back of the familiar stage.

It was no uncouth roar, but a politic outbreak of the kind to be expected within the modish walls of the Globe, and it must have warmed the cockles of Mr. Stone's heart. The delight of the audience in what Mr. Stone had to offer and the triumphant manner of his resturn made the evening gala in the theatre year.

Mr. Dillingham had not brought Mr. Stone back alone. Some of his most popular assistants were with him. There were the Brown Brothers with their crooning and melodious saxophones. Miss Teresa Valerio and little Miss Valerio of previous shows in his indian song and in "What Makes the Wild Waves Wild?" Miss Caldwell's other store, and bis departure from his piace of business gave him the first opportunity to show Mrs. Cheb chard with the arcibate skill. He tenped, bounded, fell and otherwise progressed from one side of the stage to the other with a rapidity which kept the audience puzzled as to the spot in which he would next be visible. Then his natural humor had its fullest opportunity in "I Want a Lily," which he danced with the agile with the agile and melodious saxophones, Miss Tues agile and strength of previous shows in his indian song and in "What Makes the Wild Waves Wild?" Miss Teresa Valerio and little Miss Violet Zell who so courageously alds Mr. Stone in his dances and enough talented assistants to keep this latest entertainment up to the high average of its predecessors. There were two acts with scenes in a court room, in a shop, a school, the Red Canyon, on a hypothetical beach, in an imaginary "Melodytile" and then in an altogether fentastic "Land of Heart's Desire."

Mr. Stone always brings something new to his admirers. He is the virtuose among acrobatic comedians who never its content to stand still. So last night he exhibited new and amazing skill with a blacksnake whip. He whirled it in such masterful fashion through the air that he knocked off the hat of an interpild assistant, then whisked a paper out of his hand and finally neatify whipped the cigar out of his mouth. The cigar was a long one, to be sure, but it took a brave man to stand the tests of calmy.

Mr. Stone then appeared in an Indian disguisse, which gave him the oppor-
